

January 23, 2020

College of Business Graduate Programs, URI
Kingston, RI 02881

To whom it may concern:

My name is Matthew Ramsey and I am an Assistant Professor in the Department of Cell and Molecular Biology at the University of Rhode Island. It is my great pleasure to recommend Emily Loomis to the Labor Relations and Human Resources MS program here at URI.

Emily was a former student of mine who then went on to work as a Summer Undergraduate Research Fellow (SURF) in my laboratory last summer. Emily rapidly picked up on the work and techniques we trained her in and became the most competent undergraduate student (out of 5 total) that we had in the lab in a matter of weeks. Emily impressed myself and my graduate students and during her short summer project was able to build a molecular biology tool that we still utilize in the lab at present. We were all glad when Emily accepted my request to stay on as a student researcher during this past year. Emily will be a secondary author on a manuscript we are putting together to publish sometime during 2020. In the lab Emily was organized, competent and thorough.

Typically with many science students I have ones that are not as adept at personal communication or empathy. We tend to attract the anti-social or introverted types which is always a challenge to put together in a team setting. Emily was a fantastic addition in this regard. She is an extremely outgoing and fearless individual in our social group and rapidly elevated the level of interactions of those around her. Having her in the lab with the rest of my people made everyone better and we are sad to see her go.

Emily had no problems absorbing and then utilizing complex techniques and was open when she did not understand certain aspects which made her very easy to train and work with. I am absolutely confident that Emily can be proficient in whatever field she chooses to be. Because of these aspects I do not hesitate to give Emily my highest possible recommendation for your program. I also give an equal recommendation towards her receiving a graduate assistantship for her work as it will be well spent on someone like Emily.

Sincerely,

Matthew Ramsey
University of Rhode Island
mramsey@uri.edu